Anticipated Services:

Corus International is applying for a 12-month humanitarian program that includes the provision of mobile medical services to vulnerable populations, including Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs), returnees, and other vulnerable groups. The project geography anticipates the provision of these services across select districts of Chernihiv, Sumy, Kharkiv, and Zaporizhzhya regions, and often covering high-risk Hromadas affected by the ongoing conflict. Mobile Medical Services are expected to be carried out using modified mini-buses or equivalent transportation, which will serve as temporary medical check-up offices for the doctor's brigade accompanying the vehicle.

In general, medical services revolve around primary care and referrals, and include specialists such as family doctors (with a specialty in Cardiology), Psychologists, and Gynecologists. As part of the medical services, the mobile team should have access to, or be able to travel with, a psychologist who will provide emergency psychological support and mental health and psychosocial services to the affected population.

The provider will be working closely with Corus International's team as it relates to the planning of the movement, patient management, safety and security, access and other pertinent logistics associated with the delivery of services. Illustrative services include:

- General patient intake
- Gynecological evaluation (including rapid screening tests)
- ECG and portable ultrasound capabilities, Holter monitoring
- Access to and ability to input patient data into the centralized national database "ESUZ"
- Psychological support / Trauma care
- It is anticipated that the project will cover 10,000 patients across the proposed geographies, and the provider will be advised on the estimated number of beneficiaries split per region.
